Blogging the Arminianism and Adventism Symposium

A blue banner for the Arminianism and Adventism Symposium. On the left is a portrait of Jacob Arminius with the name 'Jacob Arminius' written below it. To the right of the portrait, the text reads: 'Arminianism and Adventism' in large white font, 'Celebrating Our Soteriological Heritage' in smaller white font, 'October 14 -16, 2010' in smaller white font, and 'Andrews University, Berrien Springs, MI' in smaller white font.

Are we born sinners?

Are we justified by faith and works?

Was all humanity justified at the cross?

Was the atonement completed on the cross?

Memory, Meaning & Faith is partnering with the organizers of the Arminianism and Adventism Symposium to offer full summaries of plenary and selected breakout presentations on topics such as atonement, predestination, grace, free-will, and judgment. The purpose of the symposium is to "discuss the Adventist understanding of salvation with its roots in 17th century Arminianism and in Wesleyan thought." Notable presenters include Arminian theologians Roger Olson, Barry Callen, Keith Stanglin; as well as Adventist scholars including George Knight, Woodrow Whidden, and Denis Fortin.

The purpose of blogging the symposium is to extend the benefits thereof beyond the walls of Andrews' seminary building. But if you want to experience the informal discussions, fellowship, and serendipitous connections that happen at an event like this, you just have to be there. (Registration is only $50!) Regardless of whether you're physically present or not, you are welcome to join the discussion on this blog.
