Edwin Reynolds
Southern Adventist University

This is the last issue that will come out under my name. Due to the fact that I was granted a sabbatical by my employing organization for eight months beginning in January 2010, I elected to resign from this responsibility in order to give full time to my research and writing project during the sabbatical. The editorship and the articles for this issue were handed over to Randy Younker, the Vice President for Publications of the Adventist Theological Society, who has volunteered to take on this project. It has been a privilege to serve in this capacity for the past four years, but I leave this journal in the capable hands of Randy, who previously served as an interim editor before I was asked to take over the responsibility at the end of 2005. Thank you to Randy, and best wishes for the future success of the journal.

I also want to extend a special word of appreciation to Ed Christian, who has served for many years both as editor and then as associate editor. Ed has been a very capable and hard working editor to whom we owe much for the many issues that he saw through to publication over the years. Due to financial constraints, the ATS Executive Committee has had to reorganize and consolidate its staffing. Our best wishes as you pursue other projects and we thank you, Ed, for your valuable service.

Our readers will note that, despite all good intentions, we ended up with another double issue this year instead of two separate issues, as planned. We do apologize for the delay and hope you will continue to indulge us with your patience and understanding. However, despite the setbacks, we are happy to announce that we now have the articles in hand to get the journal back on schedule. If you have a paper to submit, we encourage you to do so. Without submissions we cannot produce a journal. If you are requested to help referee a paper, we encourage you to do so and to do it in a timely fashion. Thus, everyone will contribute to the success of the journal.

Thank you again for your support and your patience. It has been a privilege to serve you.
