“God made man before woman to give him time to think of an answer for her first question.”
~Anonymous

Last weekend was family reunion for us at the beach. Being unbelievably HOT at home, my daughter and I decided to head out earlier than the rest. We chose to take the grandkids/niece and nephew along with us, so that their Mommy and Daddy would have uninterrupted time to pack.

On the ride over, Jadyn, 5 yrs old, spent 75% of the time entertaining himself with noise/sound effects. Not conversation, questions, or words. Just noises to go along with his imagination.

In the seat next to him, Savannah, 3 yrs old, entertained herself with singing, and conversing with Auntie and I. They both enjoyed their ride and entertained themselves quite well, just in different ways.

I remember when my boys were younger. They would begin picking at each other, talking macho, and/or sparring. As their mother, I didn’t understand they were just doing what boys do. They didn’t have to think or act like me. In fact they were incapable of doing so. I’m sure it was frustrating for them when I tried to fit them in my mold.

It’s quite fascinating the differences in men and women. It can sometimes be quite discouraging trying to communicate if we don’t understand the differences.

Ron and Nancy’s article in this newsletter sheds light on the ways we are different and how we are alike.

Men, Women - Are They Different?

“Oh come on! Do you really have to write a whole article about the differences between male and female? Is this an insult to our intelligence, or is there really something you have to say that might make a difference?” you might ask.

“Isn’t this a subject that has been worked to death, that has books written about it and is argued and negatively commented on by husbands and wives everywhere?”

We shall see if this article can add anything to the story that is presented in most circles – women are emotional and men are sexual. To a degree this well-considered theory might be more than just a theory – and then again, it might be as bogus as can be. Let’s investigate!

Medical Education Online tells us that there are nine basic differences:
1. Total brain size: In adults, the average brain weight in men is about 11-12% MORE than the average brain weight in women. Men's heads are also about 2% bigger than women's. This is due to the larger physical stature of men. Male's larger muscle mass, and larger body size require more neurons to control them. This does not suggest that due to the larger brain, males are smarter than females.

2. Cell number: men have 4% more brain cells than women, and about 100 grams more of brain tissue. This may explain why women are more prone to dementia (such as Alzheimer's disease) than men, because although both may lose the same number of neurons due to the disease, "in males, the functional reserve may be greater as a larger number of nerve cells are present, which could prevent some of the functional losses."

3. Cellular connections: while men have more neurons in the cerebral cortex, women have a more developed neuropil, or the space between cell bodies, which contains synapses, dendrites and axons, and allows for communication among neurons.

4. Corpus callosum: it is reported that a woman's brain has a larger corpus collumnum, which means women can transfer data between the right and left hemisphere faster than men. Men tend to be more left brained, while women have greater access to both sides. (however other studies have told a different story).

5. Hypothalamus: LeVay discovered that the volume of a specific nucleus in the hypothalamus (third cell group of the interstitial nuclei of the anterior hypothalamus) is twice as large in heterosexual men than in women and homosexual men, thus prompting a heated debate whether there is a biological basis for homosexuality.

   It is wise however to note the specific function of the hypothalamus, which is homeostasis, or maintaining the body's status quo. Factors such as blood pressure, body temperature, fluid and electrolyte balance, and body weight are held to a precise value called the set-point. Although this set-point can migrate over time, from day to day it is remarkably fixed.

6. Language: two areas in the frontal and temporal lobes related to language (the areas of Broca and Wernicke) were significantly larger in women, thus providing a biological reason for women's notorious superiority in language-associated thoughts. For men, language is most often just in the dominant hemisphere (usually the left side), but a larger number of women seem to be able to use both sides for language. This gives them a distinct advantage. If a woman has a stroke in the left front side of the brain, she may still retain some language from the right front side. Men who have the same left sided damage are less likely to recover as fully. Curiously, oriental people which use pictographic (or ideographic) written languages tend also to use both sides of the brain, regardless of gender.

7. Inferior parietal lobule (IPL): This is a brain region in the cortex, which is significantly larger in men than in women. This area is bilateral and is located just above the level of the ears (parietal cortex). Furthermore, the left side IPL is larger in men than the right side. In women, this asymmetry is reversed, although the difference between left and right sides is not so large as in men. This is the same area which was shown to be larger in the brain of Albert Einstein, as well as in other physicists and mathematicians. So, it seems that IPL's size correlates highly with mental mathematical abilities. Studies have linked the right IPL with the memory involved in understanding and manipulating spatial relationships and the ability to sense relationships between body parts. It is also related to the perception of our own affects or feelings. The left IPL is involved with perception of time and speed, and the ability to mentally rotate 3-D figures.

8. Orbitofrontal to amygdala ratio (OAR): In one project, they measured the size of the orbitofrontal cortex, a region involved in regulating emotions, and compared it with the size of the amygdala, implicated more in producing emotional reactions. The investigators found that women possess a significantly larger orbitofrontal-to-amygdala ratio (OAR) than men do. One can speculate from these findings that women might on average prove more capable of controlling their emotional reactions.

9. Limbic size: females, on average, have a larger deep limbic system than males. This gives females several advantages and disadvantages. Due to the larger deep limbic brain women are more in touch with their feelings, they are generally better able to express their feelings than men. They have an increased ability to bond and be connected to others. Females have a more acute sense of smell, which is likely to have developed from an evolutionary need for the mother to recognize her young. Having a larger deep limbic system leaves a female somewhat more susceptible to depression, especially at times of significant hormonal changes such as the onset of puberty, before menses, after the birth of a child and at menopause. Women attempt suicide three times more than men. Yet, men kill themselves three times more than women, in part, because they use more violent means of killing themselves (women tend to use overdoses with pills while men tend to either shoot or hang themselves) and men are generally less connected to others than are women. Disconnection from others increases the risk of completed suicides.
Well, there you go. That’s some interesting and useful information and it is certainly scientifically based. Now that you know this, certain things can be understood, such as:

- Men’s hats will probably be too big for women.
- Women need a larger number of brain cells to help ward off Alzheimer’s Disease or dementia.
- Women’s brains have more cell connections, giving them the ability to “connect the dots” a bit easier.
- Women have the ability to move left to right and right to left hemispheres faster than men, so it’s easier for a woman to apply the facts to a relational situation or add up the emotional components of a purely factual situation. Great for the family but perhaps not in wartime strategies.
- Women have a harder time maintaining their weight (gain it easier) probably because the hypothalamus is smaller.
- Women tend to talk more and have an easier time of putting words to thoughts.
- Men are better at math (as a whole) and spatial relationships.
- Women seem to have an easier time of controlling their emotions.
- Women seem to be in better touch with their feelings and find it easier to express them. Women attempt suicide more often at men, but men successfully end their lives more often than women.

That’s perhaps more information than you wanted or needed, but on the other hand, it may have provided some of you with valuable data, helpful in your everyday life.

Let’s look from a different vantage point now. Some time ago, a woman became fascinated in the subject of what men really want or need. She decided to do some research which she hoped would answer that question once and for all, because women really want to know — or do they? As a result of her research, Shaunti Feldhahn wrote the book, “For Women Only”. To her surprise and the shock of many women reading the book who have a very different pre-conceived view, men’s primary desire is not sex. Oh yes, sex sells, sex is a big attention-getting subject, but it is not what is primary in the mind of a guy. Men really want and need respect — from their mothers when they are children, from their women, from their children and from their bosses and subordinates at work. Surprised? We were too! But, it did ring a bell in Ron’s head, and it has in the minds and hearts of other men we have talked to.

Ms. Feldhahn also worked on a book about women with her husband — “For Men Only”. Their research discovered, and this was not a great surprise, that women’s primary desire and need is an emotional connection with the prominent people in her life, most importantly, her husband.

Now let’s focus on how men and women are the same. Every human, regardless of gender has a great need, given to us by our Creator. That need is to belong, to be accepted and loved. We get that need filled by our connections with parents, beginning at conception, and they are the ones who give us our initial and most important connection. It is through that connection that we gain a picture of who God is. We decided that He exists, He loves, He cares and He wants the best for us, based on what was observed and felt in our early formative years with parents. That initial connection sets the stage for how we will perceive our connections with others throughout life.

In this initial connection we experience respect, or we experience scorn. We experience an emotional bond or we experience distance and disconnection. In every walk of life and at every age, we need to be connected. Cell phones, the internet, facebook, twitter and various other communication devices and programs tell us that loudly.

So how do we put this all together? Like this:

- Men and women are alike in that both genders have a need and a desire to be connected with others, especially a significant other with whom we can be intimate and feel totally loved and accepted. Men experience that connection when they feel respected, and they express that connection sexually.
- Women experience that connection when they feel heard and emotionally bonded with another. They feel the need to give and take in communication. They express their connection in verbal and physical affection — in words and deeds.

So there you have it! We are alike and we are different, and isn’t that a good think. God gave us two hands also. They are alike and yet they are different. The combination of the two make a pair, a complete whole, just like the combination of men and women make a pair, a complete whole. Let’s rejoice in our sameness AND our differences!

“Fixable Life, Inc.”

“When preparing for work, a woman will put on a Mondi wool suit, and then slip into Reebok sneakers. She will carry her dress shoes in a plastic bag from Saks. When a woman gets to work, she will put on her dress shoes. Five minutes later, she will kick them off because her feet are under her desk. A man will wear one pair of shoes the entire day.”

Roger and Elaine

Let's say a guy named Roger is attracted to a woman named Elaine. He asks her out to a movie; she accepts; they have a pretty good time. A few nights later he asks her out to dinner, and again they enjoy themselves. They continue to see each other regularly, and after a while neither one of them is seeing anybody else.

And then, one evening when they’re driving home, a thought occurs to Elaine, and, without really thinking, she says it aloud: "Do you realize that, as of tonight, we’ve been seeing each other for exactly six months?"

And then there is silence in the car. To Elaine, it seems like a very loud silence. She thinks to herself: Geez, I wonder if it bothers him that I said that. Maybe he’s been feeling confined by our relationship; maybe he thinks I’m trying to push him into some kind of obligation that he doesn’t want, or isn’t sure of.

And Roger is thinking: Gosh. Six months.

And Elaine is thinking: But, hey, I’m not so sure I want this kind of relationship, either. Sometimes I wish I had a little more space, so I’d have time to think about whether I really want us to keep going the way we are, moving steadily toward . . . I mean, where are we going? Are we just going to keep seeing each other at this level of intimacy? Are we heading toward marriage? Toward children? Toward a lifetime together? Am I ready for that level of commitment? Do I really even know this person?

Change

The word CHANGE seems to be a 2008-2009 Buzz Word! Ron and Nancy Rockey decided to make some CHANGES too! Here's what they are saying:

"We are living in grand and awful times - times of change. But the change we are announcing IS good for the economy! Because the economy of the United States and the world is hurting, companies, churches and individuals are hurting, Fixable Life has decided to make a change that will BOOST the economy."

"Here's the good news: If you or your church has been wishing you could offer a seminar for your church family and/or community, this is the time to do so! Fixable Life, Inc has GREATLY reduced the price of a live, 2 day seminar! We have taken the rates back to what they were 5 or 6 years ago - cutting them over 50%.

If you are hoping for a seminar in your area, give us a call for the details. You will want to book your date soon, as available dates will fill up quickly. You can contact us by e-mail at: rockeys@itsfixable.com 505-990-0250.

Announcements

Non-Profit Status:

As a non-profit corporation, our aim is to assist hurting people to find relief through the materials we've written, the seminars we teach, and the recovery programs we've produced.

If you are willing to assist us in these endeavors, here are a few of the projects currently in process, for which we certainly need funding.

1. TV Programming for KSCE-TV, a Christian station out of El Paso, Texas broadcasting to Juarez, Mexico, El Paso, Las Cruces, Alamogordo and surrounding towns. El Paso has the largest U.S. military installation in the country. Both the English and Spanish versions of Binding the Wounds will be broadcast. On July 9, advertising for the programming starts for one week. The actual 22 sessions of programming start broadcasting on July 16, 2009.

Viewers can send in for the accompanying workbook at a greatly reduced rate. Those workbooks need to be co-sponsored by supporters of this ministry.

We are doing a mini-seminar free of cost for the station’s staff. Travel expenses & supplies need to be covered.

2. We are offering the recovery programs for prisoners. Prisons do not have funding for the DVD's or the workbooks, so this is a needed and valid project for supporters.

3. There are many people who call for help, but cannot afford the necessary testing. A fund for supplementing the cost is being established.

Your help and support in these and other endeavors is greatly appreciated!
And Roger is thinking: . . . so that means it was . . . let's see . . . February when we started going out, which was right after I had the car at the dealer's, which means . . . lemme check the odometer . . . Whoa! I am way overdue for an oil change here.

And Elaine is thinking: He's upset. I can see it on his face. Maybe I'm reading this completely wrong. Maybe he wants more from our relationship, more intimacy, more commitment; maybe he has sensed -- even before I sensed it -- that I was feeling some reservations. Yes, I bet that's it. That's why he's so reluctant to say anything about his own feelings. He's afraid of being rejected.

And Roger is thinking: And I'm gonna have them look at the transmission again. I don't care what those morons say, it's still not shifting right. And they better not try to blame it on the cold weather this time. What cold weather? It's 87 degrees out, and this thing is shifting like a garbage truck, and I paid those incompetent thieves $600.

And Elaine is thinking: He's angry. And I don't blame him. I'd be angry, too. I feel so guilty, putting him through this, but I can't help the way I feel. I'm just not sure.

And Roger is thinking: They'll probably say it's only a 90-day warranty. That's exactly what they're gonna say, the scumballs.

And Elaine is thinking: maybe I'm just too idealistic, waiting for a knight to come riding up on his white horse, when I'm sitting right next to a perfectly good person, a person I enjoy being with, a person I truly do care about, a person who seems to truly care about me. A person who is in pain because of my self-centered, schoolgirl romantic fantasy.

And Roger is thinking: Warranty? They want a warranty? I'll give them a warranty. I'll take their warranty and stick it right up their . . .

"Roger," Elaine says aloud.

"What?" says Roger, startled.

"Please don't torture yourself like this," she says, her eyes beginning to brim with tears. "Maybe I should never have . . Oh, I feel so . . ."

(She breaks down, sobbing.)

"What?" says Roger.

"I'm such a fool," Elaine sobs. "I mean, I know there's no knight. I really know that. It's silly. There's no knight, and there's no horse."

"There's no horse?" says Roger.

"You think I'm a fool, don't you?" Elaine says.

"No!" says Roger, glad to finally know the correct answer.

"It's just that . . . It's that I . . . I need some time," Elaine says.

(There is a 15-second pause while Roger, thinking as fast as he can, tries to come up with a safe response. Finally he comes up with one that he thinks might work.)

"Yes," he says.

(Elaine, deeply moved, touches his hand.)

"Oh, Roger, do you really feel that way?" she says.

"What way?" says Roger.

"That way about time," says Elaine.

"Oh," says Roger. "Yes."

(Elaine turns to face him and gazes deeply into his eyes, causing him to become very nervous about what she might say next, especially if it involves a horse. At last she speaks.)

"Thank you, Roger," she says.

"Thank you," says Roger.

Then he takes her home, and she lies on her bed, a conflicted, tortured soul, and weeps until dawn, whereas when Roger gets back to his place, he opens a bag of Doritos, turns on the TV, and immediately becomes deeply involved in a rerun of a tennis match between two Czechoslovakians he never heard of. A tiny voice in the far recesses of his mind tells him that something major was going on back there in the car, but he is pretty sure there is no way he would ever understand what, and so he figures it's better if he doesn't think about it.

The next day Elaine will call her closest friend, or perhaps two of them, and they will talk about this situation for six straight hours. In painstaking detail, they will analyze everything she said and everything he said, going over it time and time again, exploring every word, expression, and gesture for nuances of meaning, considering every possible ramification. They will continue to discuss this subject, off and on, for weeks, maybe months, never reaching any definite conclusions, but never getting bored with it, either.

Meanwhile, Roger, while playing racquetball one day with a mutual friend of his and Elaine's, will pause just before serving, frown, and say:

"Norm, did Elaine ever own a horse?"
