8-2006

Andrews Hires New Gymnics Coach

Beverly Stout

Andrews University

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.andrews.edu/luh-pubs

Recommended Citation

https://digitalcommons.andrews.edu/luh-pubs/615

This News is brought to you for free and open access by the Lake Union Herald at Digital Commons @ Andrews University. It has been accepted for inclusion in Lake Union Herald by an authorized administrator of Digital Commons @ Andrews University. For more information, please contact repository@andrews.edu.
Andrews Hires New Gymnastics Coach

The 2006–2007 school year will bring a new face to gymnastics at Andrews University: Christian Lighthall. Gymnastics runs through Lighthall’s veins. Both an experienced gymnast and coach, Lighthall comes to Andrews from Mount Pisgah Academy in N.C., where he coached and taught since 1999. He also spent three years as a coach at Hinsdale Adventist Academy in Ill. and one year at Monterey Bay Academy in Monterey, Calif. In 1995, Lighthall graduated with a degree in physical education from Southern Adventist University in Collegedale, Tenn., where he was a member on the Gym-Masters team for five years. But his love for gymnastics stretches back through his days on the Bass Memorial Academy team.

Lighthall brings with him not only fresh ideas for routines and stunts, but a passion for the sport and the Andrews University Gymnastics tradition. “Andrews has a long tradition of gymnastics, and is really the birthplace of Adventist gymnastics,” he notes. “My goal is to expand and continue the Gymnics legacy, as well as take the program to a new level of excellence. My idea of a strong team is not only based on the performance presented on the mat; a Christ-centered team that is bonded closely together can accomplish many incredible things and touch many lives. My primary goal as a coach is for the Gymnics to be a trophy for Christ.”

Lighthall joins the Andrews community with his wife of 11 years, Brandee, and their two pet Boxers. When he’s not spotting back flips and choreographing floor routines, Lighthall enjoys traveling, reading, photography, and of course, sports.

Merkel Pens New Series of Books for Young Readers

Ruth Merkel has always loved telling stories. When her granddaughter, Erin, was born, Ruth wanted to share with her not only the family stories she cherished, but the significance of what it meant for Erin to be a sixth generation Seventh-day Adventist and 13th generation American.

“I wanted her to know it wasn’t by chance that she was a sixth generation Adventist.” Ruth explains, “that it was by God’s providence, guidance, and abundant love. Heritage is very important and too often not paid attention to.”

So, Ruth started to write, putting together a small booklet of stories for Erin about each of the six generations of Adventist girls in her family. About a year after she finished the booklet, Ruth saw an ad in the Andrews Agenda, Andrews University’s weekly newsletter, about an upcoming visit by representatives from the Review and Herald Publishing Association. Thinking it was a seminar for writers, Ruth called and set an appointment time; however, upon her arrival, she found herself in a one-on-one meeting with editors looking for new authors. Ruth showed them her book of stories, and it peaked their interest. Soon, Ruth found herself with a book contract.

Now, almost ten years after that meeting, the first three, in what will be a series of six books, hit the shelves in May 2006. The Hannah’s Girls series takes young readers back through six generations of Adventist girls, starting with Ann (1833–1897), Ruth’s great-grandmother and Erin’s great-great-great grandmother, Marilla (1851–1916), Grace (1890–1973), Ruth, Elaine, and of course, Erin. The last three books are expected to be released sometime next year. Ann, Marilla, and Grace are now available through the Review and Herald Publishing Association, the Andrews University Bookstore, Adventist Book Centers across the country, and Amazon.com.

Ruth is a long-time member of the Berrien Springs community, serving as secretary to four Andrews University presidents, as well as attending the university herself, receiving a B.A. in office management in 1989. Currently retired, she and her husband Eugene recently celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. Ruth’s granddaughter, Erin, will be a senior this year at Spring Valley Academy, in Dayton, Ohio.

Beverly Stout, University Relations media relations coordinator