Tradition claims that the Lemonweir River was named for a dream. Prior to the War of 1812, an Indian runner was dispatched with a war belt of wampum with a request for the Dakotas and Chippewas to meet at the big bend of the Wisconsin River (Portage). While camped on the banks of the Lemonweir, the runner dreamed that he had lost his belt of wampum at his last sleeping place. On waking in the morning, he found his dream to be a reality and he hastened back to retrieve the belt. During the 1820's, the French-Canadian fur traders called the river, La memoire - the memory.

The Lemonweir rises in the extensive swamps and marshes in Monroe County. The river divides Juneau County into two topographic areas. The region north of the Lemonweir River Valley, which comprises two-thirds of the county, is a nearly level sand plain covered with marshes and swamps. The southern one-third of the county is a rugged, highland plateau, dissected in every direction by valleys and ravines.

The river has given its name to Lemonweir Township, the East Lemonweir Lutheran Church, the Lemonweir Valley Press, etc.

Introduction: The Suldal Norwegian-American Settlement of Juneau County

Ole Gjermundson Tveit from Upper Telemark, Norway must be considered the actual founder of the Norwegian settlement in Juneau County. A bachelor, he had come to Maughs Mill (Mauston) from the Norwegian settlement called Koshkonong to work in the sawmill for Milton M. Maughs. In his spare time, Ole explored the surrounding countryside looking for good land. During his rambles, he found an uncommonly beautiful valley a few miles west of Mauston. The valley was nearly round in shape, level, and protected against weather on all sides.

The land was different at that time. The hills and bluffs were steeper, the creeks were wider with beaver dams and fallen trees. Virgin timber covered much of the area. Travel was difficult. Ole had to wallow through the marsh bottoms and ford the creeks. Many of the huge trees were hollow at the bottom because of the fires that the Indians set each spring to burn off the prairies and start the new growth. Both the Ho-Chunk (Winnebago) and Menominee Indians occupied the area.

The Lemonweir River, which gives its name to the area, takes its rise from extensive swamps and marshes near the dividing ridge in Monroe County, and has a tributary called the Little Lemonweir, which unites with the main branch eight miles north-west of Mauston. For many miles on the head waters of the main river, the land was heavily timbered with white and Norway pines, which afforded a supply of valuable timber for the early settlers. The river is a very durable, permanent stream, at all times affording an abundant supply of water. The whole valley was abundantly supplied with hard timber, white and black oak, for fencing, fire-wood, etc., and good land for stock and grain farms was available.

Tveit informed his acquaintances at Koshkonong of his discovery. The Koshkonong Prairie Settlement had been established in 1840 and took its name from Lake Koshkonong Lake and Creek. The lake is located in Jefferson County at the point where Dane, Jefferson and Rock counties meet. The most important and prosperous of the Wisconsin Norwegian-American settlements, its name was applied to a general region that extended a considerable distance from Lake Koshkonong and included the southeastern portion of Dane County, the southwestern part of Jefferson County, and the northern part of Rock County. The region actually consisted of smaller settlements separated by short distances from each other. By 1850, Koshkonong had a population of 2,670 Norwegians. Tveit was a member of the Norwegian settlement near Sun Prairie in Dane County, Wisconsin which had been settled by immigrants from Telemark, Norway in 1843.

The result was that in the spring of 1850, he returned with Nils Bjornson Farastad and Ole Johnson Magnushommen, brothers-in-law who were also from Upper Telemark. They took up claims in present Lindina Township about five miles southwest of Mauston.

After breaking up some land and making hay for the winter, they returned to Dane County for their families.

According to Joseph Hanson in his History of Juneau County, Ole Johnson seemed to have the idea that he wanted the whole country because he broke up land in several places. When they returned that autumn, Knut Ormson Mo from Suldal Township, Rogaland County, Norway and Knut Mikkelson from Roldal Township, Hordaland County, Norway came with them. Their homes that autumn were hay stack houses consisting of a log frame with hay for the roof and walls. The men soon completed their log houses and made a permanent settlement (Mauston Star, June 2, 1887, p. 1.)

Most of the low land in both North and South Valley was under water when they arrived so they went out into the bluffs that reminded them of their homeland. Nils Bjornson (Benson) was the oldest so he had first choice of land. He took land in section 5 across the road from the present Suldal Cemetery. Knut Ormson chose the land which is now the Riley farm, near the junction of the present Suldal and Felland roads because the soil was black as far as he could thrust his knife and in the creek was a spring that he called the "water of life". Ole Gjermundson said he would take the land in between where Allie Peterson now lives. The 1857 tax rolls for Lindina Township show that Ole Johnson owned land in sections 4, 5, and 9.

Knudt Mikkelson settled in section 6 on what later became the Nelson and Steen farms. His brother Andres lived with him and his family.

In the fall of 1852, Helge Oleson settled in the northern part of Plymouth Township and at the same time Knudt Oland settled in the southern part of Fountain Township. John Halvorson settled on a farm adjoining Knut Ormson in section 9. Lavrens Augenson Odegaarden from Vinje Township in Telemark County also came in 1852. Lavrens' sister, Margit, was the wife of Ole Johnson Magnushommen.

Knut Ormson was the beginning of the connection between Suldal in Rogaland County, Norway and Juneau County, Wisconsin. "America Fever" traveled through Norway in waves so that people within any given area might be expected to be influenced by the urge to emigrate at the same time. Shiploads of people from the same old-country region sailed together and sought land together. Later arrivals from the same part of Norway naturally gravitated to the settlements of their own people. Letters and prepaid tickets further encouraged this development.

This was an important aspect of Norwegian-American community building:
Religious observance was from the beginning, a fundamental aspect of life in Norwegian immigrant communities, providing social as well as spiritual solace, and it was often the source of the first emergence of a sense of community. These church centered communities often reflected strong provincial, parish, and neighborhood allegiances transported from the homeland as well. The intensely streamlike chain migrations of Norwegians from specific valleys and fjords in Norway to specific settlements in America created a kind of cultural homogeneity and sense of belonging in Norwegian immigrant settlements that was conducive to the implantation of a fervently supported parish church as a community focus (Legreid, Ann Marie, "Community Building, Conflict and Change; Geographic Perspective on the Norwegian-American Experience in Frontier America," IN Wisconsin Land and Life, edited by Robert C. Ostergren and Thomas R. Vale, Univ of Wis Press, 1977, pp. 300-19).

Gunder Johnson Braatveit, who emigrated from Suldal in 1852, came to Lindina in 1853. He stopped first with Odd Larson's father, Lars Olson Osteraa, another immigrant from Suldal, for a short time in Dane County. While there he learned about the Lemonweir Settlement through Nils Bjornson whom Lars Olson had bought out prior to Bjornson's move to the Lemonweir valley.

By 1854, the small community had grown to 12 families and 43 individuals. On May 22, 1854, John Halvorsen, Knud Ormson, Ole Jhanson, Nils Bjornson, Gunder Johansen, Laurans Augondsen, and Andres Mikelsen sent a letter to Pastor H. A. Preus of Spring Prairie in Dane County, Wisconsin asking for a visit by a Norwegian clergyman once or twice a year. They wrote him that they were located twenty miles northwest of the Dells bridge in Lisbon Township, Adams County. They had begun to build a schoolhouse and had chosen the location of a churchyard which they wanted to have dedicated.

THE ORMSON FAMILY

FIRST GENERATION

Orm Torson Mo

1 Orm Torson Mo, the son of Tore Ormson Hamre, Roldal (c1750-1791) and Disa Knutsdtr. Rabba, Roldal (1742-?), was born on the Haaranes farm in 1780/81 in Roldal Township in Hordaland County, Norway, a district directly north of Suldal Township. His family descended from Oluf Sukka, who lived in Suldal in 1563 (see chart - Ancestry of Orm Torson Mo below) (Rudolf Dreyer, Sukka-Aetta). Orm came to Suldal and married Ingeborg Larsdatter on November 8, 1812.

Ingeborg, the daughter of Lars Pederson Vinje (1765-1798) and Mari Hansdatter (1761-1831), was born in 1791 in Suldal. Her father was from Suldal and her mother from Arendal, a city in Aust-Agder County. Lars got a lease to the Nedre Moen husmann place on the Vinje farm from the parish pastor in 1791. He died when Ingeborg was seven and his widow remarried to Johannes Anfinnson Steine in 1799. They moved to Steine and Ingeborg's uncle, Peder Pederson, a brother of Lars, took over the Nedre Moen husmann place at Vinje (see charts on ancestry and collateral descendants of Ingeborg Larsdtr. Vinje below).

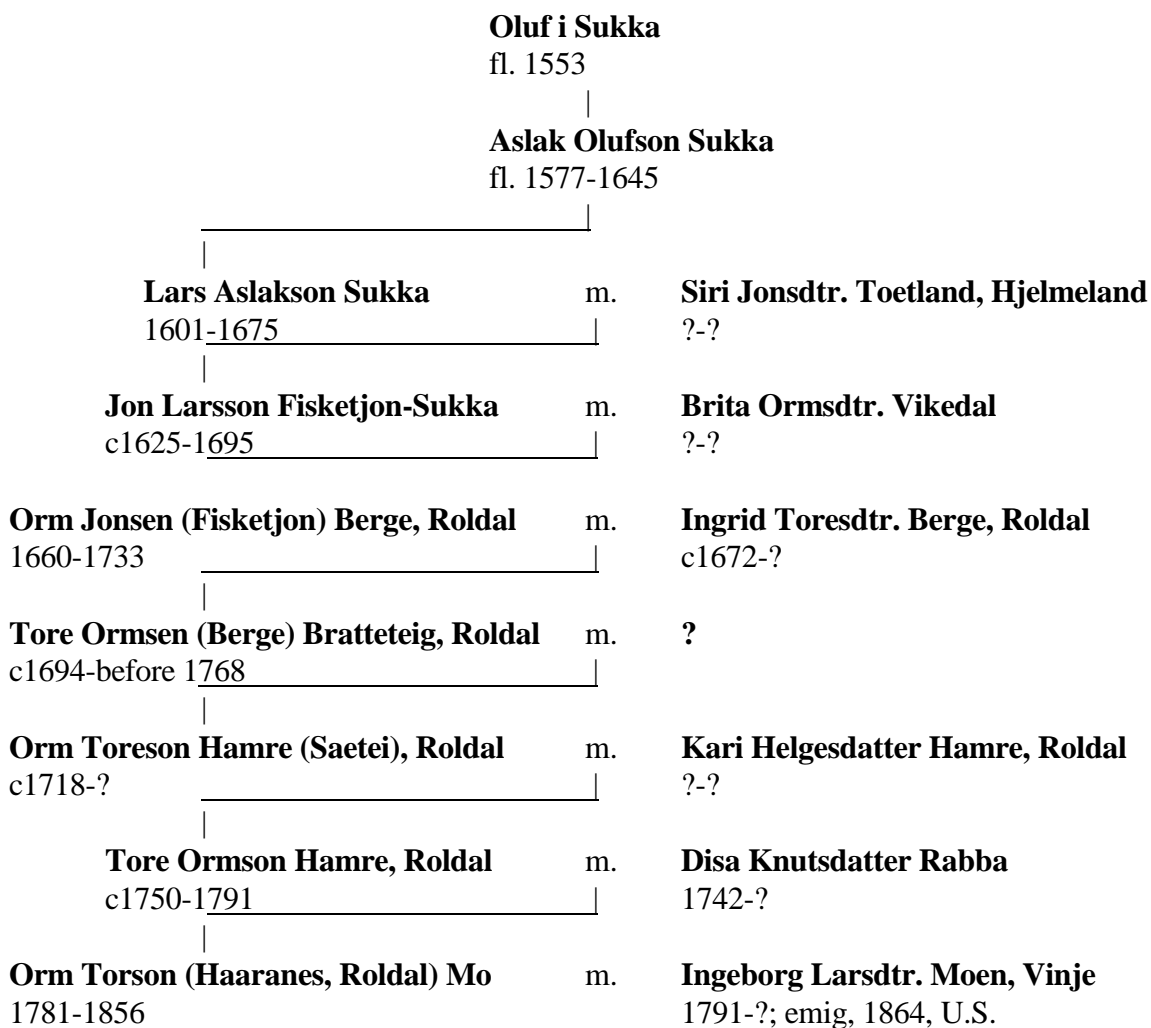

Orm and Ingeborg lived at Haugen on the Mo farm in Suldal, then in the amt (county) of Stavanger (now Rogaland fylke). Orm died in 1856 after 44 years of marriage.

Ingeborg emigrated to America in 1864 with her daughter, Disa. She was listed as Isabelle Ormson in Lindina Township in the 1870 census and was living with her widowed daughter-in-law, Hanna (Anna) Johnson. Anna was the widow of Johannes Ormson (see #7) (Gamle Suldal, pp. 107, 167, 248, 319; Sukka Aetta, pp. 107, 180, 277; R. B., pp. 370, 559).

Tore was a husmann on the Gallandsbakkane subfarm under Bergjord from about 1854. Later, Tore and Margit lived with their son, Tor, on the Haugen subfarm under Bergjord farm #2. Their death dates are unknown (Gamle Suldal, pp. 163, 167, 334).

Second Generation

Knut Ormson

4 Knut, the son of Orm Torson Mo (1) and Ingeborg Larsdatter Moen, Vinje, was born on the Mo farm in Suldal, Norway on June 20, 1820. On his twenty-third birthday, June 20, 1843, he married Kari Osmundsdatter Vetrhus. Kari, the daughter of Osmund Osmundson Vetrhus (1782-1844) and Angjer Bjednesdatter (1780-1840), was born on December 14, 1814 in Suldal and baptized on January 1, 1815. An alternate spelling of Vetrhus was Winterhus (see Winterhus Family Chart after this record). Knut purchased farm number 2 on the Mogleiv place in 1848. However, in November 1849, Knut and Kari emigrated to America (Gamle Suldal, pp. 107, 520).

Knut and his family were the beginning of the connection between Suldal, Norway and Juneau County, Wisconsin. He and his family initially stopped in Dane County, Wisconsin, part of the Koshkonong Norwegian Settlement. Knut became acquainted with Nils Bjornson Farastad and Ole Johnson Magnushomen from Upper Telemark. In the Spring of 1850, Bjornson and Johnson had taken up claims in present Lindina Township about five miles southwest of Mauston.

In 1850, the area that is now Juneau County was part of Adams County. In 1857, Juneau County was created. Mauston (Maughs Mill) was named for Milton M. Maughs who came into possession of the lumber mill there in 1849. Maughs platted Mauston in 1854 which was incorporated as a village in 1860.

Knut and his family along with the Knut Mikkelson family from Roldal Township in Hordaland County joined the Bjornson and Johnson families when they returned to Juneau County in the autumn of 1850. Nils Bjornson was the eldest so he had first choice of land. He took land in section five across the road from the present Suldal Cemetery. Knut chose the land which is now the Riley farm (1998) near the junction of present Suldal and Felland roads because the soil was black as far as he could thrust his knife and in Brewer Creek was a spring that he called "the water of life." Their homes that autumn were hay stack houses with a log frame and hay for the roof and walls. The men soon built their log houses and made a permanent settlement (Mauston Star, June 2, 1887, p. 1).

As a new immigrant, Knut probably worked for a time as a farm hand or lumberjack. In the 1855 Wisconsin State Census, none of the Norwegian settlers are listed in Lindina Township. The few that were listed were all in Necedah which was the lumbermill center for Juneau County.

By 1854, the small Norwegian community had grown to 12 families and 43 individuals. On May 22, 1854, a letter was sent to Pastor Herman A. Preus of Spring Prairie in Dane County asking for a visit by a Norwegian clergyman once or twice a year.

Preus came the first time on July 25, 1854 and held church services and organized the Lemonweir congregation in the home of Nils Bjornson. There was no bridge across Brewer Creek and Preus had to be carried across. Knut guarded the minister's horses and buggy during the night to prevent them from being stolen by Indians. In the 1850s, the Winnebago Indians had their summer village in Lindina Township, southwest of Mauston and east of the Norwegian settlement.

Kari probably died between August 24, 1857 and March 18, 1858 because Knut took communion with his wife on the first date and without his wife on the second date. Knut was married second, in 1860 to Ellen Oleson, a widow with three children. Eldri, the daughter of Johannes Gunnarson Braatveit (1787-1866) and Brita Jonesdtr. Arhus (1773-1857), was born on January 26, 1819 in Suldal, Norway. She was married, first, to Ole Kittelson (Kjetilson). Ole was born in 1814 in Tinn Township in Telemark County. Ole and Eldri moved to the Tengesdal farm in Sand Township where they had three sons, Johannes, born on January 6, 1846, Ole, born on June 2, 1850, and Gunder, born on June 6, 1854. Ole and Ellen brought their children to Mauston, Wisconsin in 1857. Ole died in September 1859 (Gamle Suldal, pp. 576-7; Sukka Aetta, p. 141, ELCR).

Knut and Ellen were living on his farm in Lindina Township at the time of the 1860 federal census. Knut's four children and Ellen's three children are listed in the census record.

By 1860, Knut had expanded his farm to 80 acres, 50 of it under cultivation. The previous years crops totaled 300 bushels of wheat, 300 bushels of oats and lesser amounts of corn and rye. He owned three milk cows, which produced 70 pounds of butter for market. His seven sheep produced 50 pounds of wool. The farm also produced eight bushels of potatoes and three tons of hay. His land was valued at $1,000 and he owned $128 in personal property. Ellen died at age 44 in 1863.

Knut married for a third time on January 16, 1864 in Juneau County, Wisconsin by E. W. Leonard, Justice of the Peace, to Herborg Halvorsdatter Viken. Herborg, the daughter of Halvor Steinbru Halvorson (1803-1880) and Helga Johnsdtr. Steinbru (1809-1896), was born on Vika farm in Suldal Township on October 26, 1836. She emigrated with her parents in April 1863. Herborg was 27 and Knut was 43 when they were married. It was a double wedding ceremony with Herborg's brother, Halvor Halvorson (see Halvorson Family Chart after this record). Knut and Herborg were charter members of the Fountain Church in 1878.

In 1864, Knut's first wife's younger brothers, Bjedne and Osmund, Knut's widowed mother, Ingeborg, and his sister, Disa, emigrated to Juneau County. By 1870, Knut was a wealthy farmer with a 190 acre farm in Lindina Township valued at $10,000. On the 100 acres tilled, he raised 1,000 bushels of wheat and 900 bushels of oats. His personal property was valued at $600, his livestock nearly $700 more. There were two frame houses and probably three log houses on the property.

Knut had five cows which had produced 200 pounds of butter for sale that year. He also owned two horses, three mules, five sheep, and five hogs. The farm supported 21 persons. Besides Knut, his wife Herborg, and five unmarried children were Knut's son, O. K (Osmund) Ormson, his wife, Angjer, and their year old daughter, Ellen Karine, Knut's stepson, John Oleson, and Thomas Houskoldsen. The three men were hired hands for Knut. Also living on the farm were Knut's widowed mother, Herborg, and her widowed daughter-in-law, Hannah (Anna) Johnson who kept house for her (see Johannes Ormson, # 7). In yet another household were Disa Ormson, Knut's unmarried sister, and Hannah's four children. In another cabin was Betsy Johnson, an unidentified woman.

In 1871, Knut paid the passage for his 21-year old nephew, Gabriel Ormson to emigrate. Gabriel lived with Knut for a time. The 1870s were bad times for Wisconsin farmers. Knut sold his farm in Lindina and moved to a smaller farm in the Rocky Run Community in Clifton Township, Vernon County, Wisconsin. The farm was near his son O.K. Ormson's farm home. Knut worked as a blacksmith for his son O. K Ormson.

Knut died in Rocky Run, Clifton Township, Monroe County, WI on April 23, 1886 at the age of 66. He was buried in the Fountain Lutheran Cemetery. His headstone reads, "Fred med hans Stove Velsig net vare hans Minde" (Peace with his sleep, blessed his memory. Herborg continued to live on the farm in Clifton Township. She died on May 24, 1914 in Clifton Township, Monroe County, Wisconsin and was buried on May 26, 1914 from the Fountain Church (FCR; JCGS Cem Bk 3, p. 247).

See after this record pages quoting specimens of American Norwegian by Jacob and his son Tilmar. Jacob's occupation was given as a miller. Haugen quoted Jacob about the difficulty a newcomer from Norway had in understanding the changes made in the Norwegian-American language that developed. Haugen described Jacob as an immigrant of 1908, who found himself in a farming community of Western Wisconsin. Even though the dialect of Suldal was universally spoken in Juneau County, Jacob found “there they were, talking genuine Suldal, and they all talked alike. But whether they talked Suldal or they talked French made no difference at all to me, for I did not understand a word. They were chatting about ‘baren’ and ‘fila’ and ‘sheden’ and ‘malkshantie’, ‘vinnmoello’ and ‘pompo’ and all those words. I couldn’t understand about nintey per cent of all the words they used. I couldn’t understand it because all the names were half or wholly English. They talked about ‘mekar’ (makes) and ‘fiksar’ (fixes) and so forth. . . But when I went to church, the preacher preached so fine, you see, just as they did in Norway, and I understood every word.”, Haugen, p. 59.

Emma died on August 18, 1965. Jacob died on November 5, 1969 in Elroy. They were both buried in the Elroy City Cemetery (Gamle Suldal, pp. 434,673-4; Sukka Aetta, p. 342; ELCR; JGS, 2-30).
